Prophet Abiola Adebisi of Christ Miracle Church Mission (CMCM), Ojodu, Lagos, may have distanced himself from the catalogue of doomsday prophecies being passed on Nigeria by most Nigerian clerics since the dawn of year 2013.

Speaking during a press parley at his church headquarters to commemorate his 50th birthday anniversary, the seer maintained that Nigeria is going to be great again, judging by the revelation handed down by God to him.

“God told me that Nigeria is going to be Number One in Africa and I am saying this authoritatively with the anointing of God upon my life and without missing word. This Nigeria you are seeing today, full of troubles and other things, the Lord said to me, is coming back to be a great nation.

“South Africa will be Number Two, after Nigeria. Today people might not understand but when it begins to happen, they will say ‘no, no, no, God has said it before,” disclosed the prophet.

The church founder who chooses to be addressed as president, urged the citizens to run away from all manners of sins and evil acts, pointing out that a situation where people are being slaughtered and the blood of innocent people are being spilled will never prosper the land. “Do you know what those innocent people are saying before they are killed? Their blood cannot bless the land”, he stressed.

The clergyman, therefore, called for every hand to be on deck to salvage the country, while praying God to meet patriotic Nigerians’ expectation.

“All hands should be on deck. We have to do it together, we have to work it out together; it is not something like the president is there or the government is there and we expect Nigeria to be great overnight. No, it will start from our home, our family, community, leaders both at state and national levels, our churches; every hand must be on deck”, he stressed

Giving e recipe for the enthronement of good governance in the country, the minister of God implored the electorate to stop collecting money from politicians and candidates before voting for them during election.
